

The screenshot shows the website interface for the Abilene Reporter-News. At the top, there is a navigation bar with the site name and logo, and links for HOME, Back, Print Page, and Contact Us. Below this is a large blue banner with the word "OBITUARIES" in white. The main content area features the title "Today's Obituaries (Sept. 5, 1997)" in a large, bold, black font. Underneath the title, the name "W.H. 'Red' Rainwater" is displayed in a smaller, bold, black font. The obituary text follows, detailing the death of W.H. "Red" Rainwater on Wednesday in a Lubbock hospital, the funeral services at 37th Street Church of Christ, and a biographical sketch of Mr. Rainwater's life, including his birth in Damridge, Tenn., his move to Scurry County in 1922, his military service in the U.S. Army during World War II, and his career as a carpenter and painter. The text concludes with a list of survivors: his wife, one daughter (Karen Ritchey), one son (Max Rainwater), two sisters (Mildred Browne and Thula Whatley), six grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren. On the left side of the page, there is a vertical sidebar with various navigation options, including "NEWS", "AMERICA STRIKES BACK War On Terrorism", search boxes, and a list of categories like "Abilene/Big Country", "National News", "Sports", "Opinion", "Entertainment", "Classifieds", "Weather", and "About AR-N".