

There are many of these metal markers in the cemetery. The glass and the names are gone. This one has a Mason insignia at the top. I don't remember any of them having flowers on them.

Sugartown Cemetery is located in the historic town of Sugartown, LA. At one time in history, Sugartown was being considered as the "county seat" of Beauregard Parish, but De Ridder won out. In older times, I have been told there was an academy for girls and a cotton gin. And in even older times, Sugartown was the center of "neutral territory" where outlaws and westward travelers were allowed to exist side-by-side without fear. The neutral territory was claimed by four nations---the United States, Spain, France, and Mexico.

To reach the cemetery, go to the center of town (the intersection of LA 112 and LA 113) and turn towards Pitkin on LA 113. It is just north of Sugartown Baptist Church, which is only a stone's throw from the intersection. Even though it is on a main road, you have a feeling of being away from everything due to the surrounding trees.

The oldest graves we could find were in 1891-Webb Singleton and J.M. Barron. Since this is a very old cemetery, there probably are some "lost" graves. (We found evidence of unmarked graves.) I would be interested in hearing from anyone who might have knowledge of these "lost" graves.
