Mortuary Report.

News came to Dallas from Paris early yesterday morning of the death of David M. Webb, a former resident of Dallas at that place at 6:30 a.m. Webb was among the great crowd of excursionists who came down from Paris to witness the pageant of the Kaliph. Yesterday morning about 4 o'clock, while returning to his home, he fell between the cars of the train. His left leg and hand were amputated, the right arm was broken—and his head was frightfully gashed. He was taken to Paris, but died soon after his arrival. Deceased was a brother of Charles and Ollie Webb of this city. His mother also lives here. He went to Paris from Dallas about a year ago.
